

Chinese herbs

The usage of Chinese herbs to treat illnesses goes back to a history of 4000 years in the empirical medicine. There is no other medical therapy that would have such an immense background. The herbal medicine has continuously developed with the flow of time. The experience collected about the TCM herbs during thousands of years has been categorized according to taste, temperature, element, meridian functions and therapeutic effect. About 400 single herbs and thousands of formulas are available for the experienced therapist. In practice the therapist feels the pulse and looks at the tongue of the patient and asks about the patient's symptoms. On the basis of this information he will make a diagnosis. Matching to this diagnosis a herbal formula especially for the patient will be prescribed.

